SMALL CATCHES FOR HALIBUTERS

Three in Here Today—Sch.
Essex Brings Cod From Newfoundland.

The fleet of arrivals here over Sunday, numbered four crafts, three from halibuting and one from Newfoundland with a cargo of salt cod.

Saturday sch. Gossip arrived with a small halibut fare which sold to the American Halibut Company. Her fresh and salt shack was taken by the Gordon-Pew Fisheries Company.

Sch. Teazer, Capt. Peter Dunsy from Western Bank took out a 10,000 pound halibut fare at the American Halibut Company's wharf this morning. He also had 18,000 pounds fresh fish and 12,000 pounds salt cod.

During the forenoon, sch. Elmer E. Gray, Capt. John Thompkins, arrived from Sable Island Bank, having 8000 pounds halibut and 4000 pounds fresh and 4000 pounds salt cod. Capt. Thompkins was most everywhere, being driven off Georges on account of the dog-fish. For the first two weeks out, it blowed so that the craft could not fish. They finally ended up on Sable Island Bank, where fish were scarce, but in spite of adverse conditions, secured a trip. Three weeks ago, the Gray was in at Portland, landing a small fare there.

From Rose Blanche, sch. Essex, Capt. Al Evans, brings 340,000 pounds salt cod, consigned to the Cunningham & Thompson Company.

The gill netting fleet is getting smaller and smaller, although most of those now in will remain two to three weeks longer, that is while there is a dollar in it. Over Saturday and Sunday 50,000 pounds fresh fish were landed.

Capt. Matheson Was Fare of Bloaters.

With her third mackerel fare of the season, sch. Saladin, Capt. John Matheson is at Fulton market, New York, again this morning with 8000 large and medium fresh fish, mostly all bloaters according to a dispatch to the Times this morning.

Capt. Matheson is certainly in luck for it was only Thursday last that he brought in a 25,000 fare in count. Evidently the Saladin struck fish almost as soon as she got outside again, her fare being secured in latitude 38.55 in 2 fathoms of water.

The prospects are looking better and better, the run of mixed fish being taken as a good omen. There is still about three weeks of the southern season and with good weather for which everyone is hopeful, some more "doings" are looked for.

A despatch this afternoon to the Times states that sch. Benjamin A. Smith, Capt. Martin L. Welch, is at New York with 3000 large fresh mackerel.

Portland Fish Notes.

After spending Friday and Saturday on the fishing banks the majority of the larger schooners of the local fleet and some of the gill netters arrived in port Sunday, all reporting the fishing good and all having good sized fares. The schooners were the Dorcas, Albert D. Willard, Eleanor and Nellie G. Davis and they brought in a total amount of 65,000 pounds. The steamer Surf also arrived with a large fare of fish for the Burnham & Morrill Co., estimated around 100,000 pounds.

CAPE CATCH OF FLOUNDERS BIG

The flounder catch this season will be one of the largest in the history of the business at Hyannis, when it is considered how few fishing days there have been on account of stormy weather and high winds.

The season practically ended Saturday, although there will probably be some of the boats that will continue as long as prices are remunerative. This spring's catch has exceeded 5000 barrels.

The dredger Emma M., Captain Stanley Butler of Cotuit recently landed 60 barrels of flounders, the catch of one day. This was the record catch of the Hyannis fleet this season.—Patriot.

Plenty of good herring bait was taken at the traps Tuesday.

One hundred and eighty barrels of herring were taken by the Fisherman Cold Storage Tuesday—the first fish of the season.

CAPT. WEBBER BRINGS A FARE

Still they come and this morning it is sch. Lottie G. Merchant, Capt. Ralph Webber who is at Fulton Market, New York, with a fresh mackerel fare, it being his first of the season. Capt. Webber brings a mixed fare of 7000 fish in count, medium and large.

According to a dispatch to the Times, sch. Benjamin A. Smith, Capt. Martin L. Welch, reported at New York yesterday afternoon had 4000 fish, mostly large. Advices state that the mackerel seem to stay around latitude 38.28 and 38.30.

Fulton Fish Market Notes.

All things considered, trade in the salt water fish market was very satisfactory last week. There were plenty of fresh mackerel during the latter part of the week, and quotations for bloaters were practically half of the asking price of the latter part of last week. On Thursday bloaters sold at 35c, mediums 16c to 18c, and tinkers 7c. Friday's prices for mediums and tinkers were somewhat lower than on the preceding day.

Haddock brought 2 1-2 to 4c. Hake was quoted at 3 to 4c, and there was not any great demand even at these prices.

Western white halibut was quoted during the entire week at 10 to 11c a pound.

Small bluefish were scarce during the entire week, and sales were made at a shilling a pound. Large and medium bluefish brought 5 1-2 to 8c.

Back from Fernandina.

Sch. Mettacommet, Captain James McDonald, has returned to this port after an unsuccessful season blue-fishing in the south. She will now be fitted for mackerel netting by her former captain, James Hemeon.

Going to the Eastward.

Steamers Julia May, Evelyn H. and Rough Rider lifted their nets yesterday for the last time this season and will now go to the eastward, probably landing their fish in Portland. They will be followed in a few days by others of the gill netting fleet.

Changed Into Fishing Boat.

The gasoline boat Doris, formerly the United States government boat 647 has been changed into a fine type of fishing boat for Capt. E. Everett Jones of Annisquam. She measures 12.33 gross and 8.13 net and has one 10 horsepower engine.

Going Netting.

These Portland fishing steamers Pet and Ethier, which have been hauled up at Central wharf for several weeks, have about completed repairs and are being fitted out for sea. They will start out netting in a few days, and may make a try for mackerel as they come up the coast.

On the Railways.

Sch. Corona and steamer Philomena are on the Rocky Neck ways.

Sch. Pinta is on Burnham Brothers' ways.

Steamer Bessie M. Dugan is on Parkhurst's ways.

Salt Steamer Docked.

The salt steamer Cromwell, which has been in the outer harbor for the past few days, docked at Pew's Monday. Captain Nicklen's wife has arrived from England.

Cape Ann Getting Ready.

The steamer Cape Ann is having her annual spring cleaning. She will take the place of the City of Gloucester some time this week while the latter is painted up for the summer.

Going to Bay of Islands.

Capt. Robert Diggins is fitting out sch. Monitor for the Bay of Islands, N. F., where she will take on a miscellaneous cargo for her owners, the Gorton-Pew Fisheries company.

Baited at Edgartown.

Schs. Georgia and Mystery baited at Edgartown and sailed for halibut Saturday.

Back from the Eastward.

Str. Sawyer, which has been gill netting to the eastward has returned to this port.

Those Beam Trawlers.

Gloucester is still worrying about what the government intends to do in regard to the steam trawler fishing business. The otter or beam trawler is killing the old-fashioned style of fishing and if it keeps at it long enough will wipe out the industry altogether. It is a most destructive method and ruinous not only to the fish, but to the fishing grounds themselves.—Lowell Courier-Citizen.

OUTLOOK FOR N. S. FISH TRADE

Halifax Merchant Reviews Present Market Conditions Throughout Provinces.

Concerning the outlook in the fishery trade, the Halifax Herald of Wednesday prints the following:

E. F. Hart, when interviewed by the Halifax Herald yesterday afternoon regarding the fish market said:

For the first time in many years in the history of the trade, there were no low priced herrings remaining in the Halifax market. Everything saleable had been cleaned out, and while there were still a few barrels of better grades these also were both scarce and high-priced.

The stock of dry fish also was at the lowest point it had been for many years, said Mr. Hart. Probably a thousand quintals would clean up all the Halifax fish holdings from Point Pleasant to Richmond. A few scattering lots of new dry fish had been received from the shore, but only enough to demonstrate the fact that there had been fish this season.

Spring herrings were reported at Queensport and some few alewives in the St. John river. These were being used for bait at high prices. When fishermen had to pay two dollars per hundred for small herring for trawl bait and catch a half quintal of fish a morning, it was better for them to remain at home.

In eastern Halifax county, the lobster fishermen were having trouble with the packers and a good many of them had discontinued lobster fishing, refusing to sell lobsters by weight instead of being counted as usual. In other words, because they could not have it all as they had in the past, they did not want any of it. These disgruntled lobster fishermen were now turning their attention to trawling and this might result in an increase in dry fish production during the nearby months. High prices were still ruling in spite of the fact that Norway reported a fishery of unprecedented volume, about twice the quantity being landed over last year.

Lunenburg bankers to date had landed some 7000 quintals there, a very large quantity for so early in the season, and as the spring fleet continued to arrive, this would be further augmented from week to week.

About half of this quantity is haddock and this would mean some $40,000 netted by the fleet previous to the first of May, which was a considerably larger stock up to that time than ever before in the history of the industry.

Fat mackerel and salt salmon, the higher priced grades of fish, were in very poor demand, he said. In fact, they were hardly selling at all and when they did meet a market, they would realize considerably less than heretofore.

Boston reported the first fare of medium fresh mackerel caught by the southern fleet. Fish were reported to be schooling in large bodies and the prospects of a good fishing seemed to be the general opinion.

The rebellion in Mexico did not seem to have much influence over the mackerel production, said Mr. Hart, although these fish come largely from Mexican waters.

The Fisheries of P. E. Island.

In Prince Edward Island, haddock and hake are mainly used for the tables of the people and there is also used by them the same quantity of cod. Otherwise, haddock, hake and cod are very largely dry-salted and sent to Halifax to be exported, the hake going to Liverpool and about one-third of the cod to Havana. The green-salted cod, together with the larger kinds of dried cod, go to American and Canadian cities. The catch the year before last (1912) was small. Improved methods of curing cod were introduced at that time by the establishment of the North Atlantic Fisheries at Rustico.

Herring are used almost wholly for bait, either pickled or fresh. In 1912, 7000 boxes were smoked in the Georgetown herring smoker, but a late run of herring on Grand Manan has depressed prices and made island smoked herring less profitable.

The catch of smelt in 1912 was a good one for the fishermen but not for the dealers. About one-fifth of the catch were sent to Western Canada. Mackerel was plentiful in quantity and exceptionally fine in quality, 90 fish often filling a 200 pound barrel; but the demand was poor and prices rather unsatisfactory. They are sent by express to the New England market. Clams, which are also shipped principally to the United States, are becoming less plentiful than a few years ago and plans for their culture are being discussed.

Reports from the Magdalen Islands, where fisheries have much in common with Prince Edward Island, indicate a prosperous fishing year there, especially in cod and herring. In the winter, the inhabitants of the Magdalen Islands, take sleighs out on the ice floes and bag seals from straggling herds. Two years ago, in the spring of 1912, it is stated that 10,000 of these seals were shot, the oil being extracted and barreled for Nova Scotia, of which Halifax got a large share. A new industry is the smoking of bloaters, and already 6000 cases of these have been exported.

GORTON PEW CO. ADDS TO PLANT

The Gorton-Pew Fisheries Company has added another branch to its extensive plant, having taken over the Tremont, Maine, the large wharf property of Guy Parker, which they will operate on the Maine coast.

Mr. Parker who is well known among the skippers and fishing interests here, is in poor health, but will remain with the Gorton-Pew Company there. Chaney N. Hall, who has had charge of the company's interests at Bay of Islands, will manage the plant at Tremont for a while.

The Salt Mackerel Market.

Says the Fishing Gazette:

The usual quiet conditions prevailing at this season were manifested in the market for mackerel this week demand being slow and of the hand-to-mouth order. Prices remain about the same under moderate supply.

Jobbers report that very little mackerel is selling at the present time, and the only demand is the Norwegian at the higher prices.

The market for foreign salt mackerel is showing the usual dullness prevailing after the close of Lent. While stocks are in fair supply at this time, advices from abroad are not of an encouraging nature as to future supplies, and jobbers are expecting a firmer tone later on in consequence. A brisk demand is expected about the first week in June, especially in new fat Norway No. 2 and No. 3. These grades are in light supply and jobbers are of the opinion there are not enough on hand to meet future demand. On account of these reasons new fat Norway No. 2 is now quoted at $26 and new fat Norway No. 3 at $20.
